A GREAT NAVAL BATTLE.

The great sea fight between the Japanese flag-ship Matsushima and the Chinese cruiser Yang Yei, July 12th, will go down in history as one of the greatest on record.

The ships were maneuvered with extraordinary skill. They were equipped with every modern improvement, the best armament and guns that money could purchase in the best markets of the world. The Chinese cruiser drew the Japanese flag-ship away from the fleet and then spinning on her keel, struck the first blow with a thirty-eight ton gun that sent a ten and a half inch shell into the flag-ship.

From that until the close of the action, the two ships were enveloped in smoke, and it was give and take with forty ton guns hurling iron at each other at short range. The Chinese commander was evidently the man for the place. He handled his ship so skillfully that the heaviest guns of the enemy could not get the range. Finally the Japanese sent in a shot from a forty-nine ton gun, the first good right hander, so to speak, that she had been able to land. It gouged the Chinese cruiser from stem to stern, and left a wreck of the upper deck, piling the dead and wounded in heaps, and covering them with wreckage. The scene was so terrible that the Chinese gunners who had stood at their posts without a tremor, now left the gun-deck, just as they were training the forward gun on the conning tower of the enemy. It was the critical moment of the battle. Si Yang, the commander ordered the gunners to their post and they refused. He shot six dead in their tracks and the rest went back to work. An instant later they discharged the gun which gave the foe its death wound. It wrecked the conning tower, killed the Admiral and most of the officers, and placed the Japanese ship at the mercy of its adversary. At this juncture the Chinese Dragon flag was run up as a token of surrender, and just as the Chinese cruiser was to take possession of the conquered flag-ship the smoke lifted and revealed six war ships bearing down. The Chinese cruiser wheeled, and crowding on every pound of steam started on a run for its life. It was like a fox trailed by a pack of hounds at full bay. She had two hundred and fifty dead and wounded on her decks and with this ghastly burden the crippled cruiser with all its crew in the coal hole started for home. The safety valves were screwed down, streams of water were kept playing on the red hot smoke stacks while men stood over the coal heavers laboring their naked bodies with rubber packing, and plying them with gin. Under this treatment the Chinese cruiser made twenty knots an hour under the concentrated fire of six battle ships growing its wake with batteries in full play every part of the distance, beating all her competitors at the finish and making port.

It was worth a life time to every survivor of such a memorable battle to have witnessed such a day of tremendous fighting between two Titans of the sea. The Yang Yei was 1350 tons displacement, and cost a million in England. Her length was 210 feet and her twin screws developed 2600 horse power. Her rival was 4229 tons displacement length 295 feet, and her twin screws 5400 horse power. Thus it turned out that the heavier vessel got the worst of the fight. Li Yang, the young Chinaman who made such a glorious record for himself, was a graduate of the Annapolis Naval Academy. The battle of Trafalgar and the fight between the Monitor and the Merrimac at Hampton Roads will rank no higher in naval history than this. All the men that took part in the engagement can well say that they "traveled in hot company."

AMERICAN FOLLY.

Barnum, the great showman, said the American people like to be humbugged and did not object to paying handsomely for the privilege. That this is not only true of those who paid to see the woolly horse and Fee Jee mermaid, but also of the sovereigns who elect men to manage the affairs of the Nation, cannot be disputed. We allow ourselves to be duped by politicians who, for self-aggrandizement, place the people at the mercy of the cormorants of London and New York.

Commenting upon the folly of permitting the Gold Trust, which has its headquarters in Lombard Street, to control our finances and industries, the Mining and Scientific Press, a strictly non-partisan paper, says:

"We might as well permit our enemies to control our armies in time of war as to permit them to direct or control our finances and industries in time of peace. We let the agents of the Gold Trust, who contribute money freely to elect Republicans and Democrats to high places that they may have influence in the White House and the halls of Congress, whichever of the twins may be in the ascendency, run the financial affairs of our Government. We are willing to be humbugged and pay dearly for the privilege.

England buys from fifty to sixty millions of silver annually to use in her trade with India, China and other eastern countries. When our mints were open to free coinage she never bought an ounce for less than $1.29. Now she gets it for about half price. Every ounce will buy as much wheat and cotton in India as it ever would, but the silver ounce costing less, the cost of these staples delivered in Liverpool is reduced one-half through half price silver. This regulates the price of all wheat and cotton England buys from us, and these staples form nearly one-half of our exports.

This is a lesson which farmers should heed on election day. It shows how they are being duped by those who endeavor to keep within old party lines. Their products sell at one-half the prices they would readily command if silver had not been demonetized, and the money which they receive for those products, at the present low prices, will pay no more debts than when wheat brought $1.25 per bushel. Are they willing to be humbugged and pay such a ruinous price to those who are deceiving them?"

The announcement in the Herald yesterday morning that Senator Jones, of Nevada, is to stump Ohio for the Democracy was the important topic in political circles all day. Salt Lake Herald. As a specimen of fine, hand-made, campaign canvas, the above is entitled to a special premium.
